
STATISTICS THAT SHOULD BE OF CONCERN TO EVERYONE

In recent years there has been a significant withdrawal in the influence that a father has on children in families of divorce. Statistics show that most custodial parents are mothers. On an average the custodial mother spends 80% of the time with the children compared to only 20% with the father. Analysis of these trends in paternal involvement in the lives of the children result in other alarming statistics that should be of concern to everyone.

From Fatherless homes come:

- 85 % of all children that exhibit behaviour disorders
- 80 % of all rapists motivated with displaced anger
- 71 % of all high school dropouts
- 85% of all youths sitting in prisons

The most frequent reason for fathers fading from their children's lives is the interference of the mother as well as the failure of the legal and court system to recognize and to understand the importance to children of being parented by both parents.

Getting fathers kicked out of their children's lives often starts with a phone call to the police with false allegations of abuse from the mother.

Once Dad is labelled as an abuser, even if he was innocent, he may never be able to have a normal healthy relationship with his children ever again.

* sources of data available upon request

Pleading guilty to a crime you did not commit sets a poor example to your children and sets you and your children up for a future of fear and misery under the control of your spouse.

Help send a message to the system that men of honour are not going to stand by and get kicked down by the system without a fight. Show your children, your family and your friends that fighting for justice and fairness is important to you.

One peaceful way of correcting the biased and corrupt domestic violence courts is for victims of the system to overburden the police and the courts with so many cases that the system will eventually have to end its draconian, anti-male policies intended to repress men and label them as abusers – for life!

For further information about the issues about problems associated with CAS, contact the local organizations indicated below

www.CRPA.ca
www.FixCas.com
www.OntarioCFA.com
www.Ombudsman.on.ca
www.CanadaCourtWatch.com
www.QuinteAccountability.com

Don't Plead Guilty!

Helpful information to keep you from getting sucked into the domestic violence trap intended to destroy you and put your spouse clearly in command of the home, the children and you

.....for the rest of your life!

www.QuinteAccountability.com

Before you get led into the trap - understand the objectives of the domestic violence courts!

Once you understand what it is the system is trying to achieve then you will in a better position to protect yourself. The goals of the justice system in domestic violence situations is not about achieving fairness and justice. The strategy of the system is very simple:

- To get the man to plead guilty as quickly as possible.
- To obtain as many guilty pleas from men as possible which will help to distort domestic violence figures and make men look more violent than they really are.
- To avoid a criminal trial. This ties up too much time and creates a lot of work for prosecutors. They want lots of convictions without the work of a trial.
- To put the woman effectively in control of the household, the children and the man for the rest of the man's life.
- To give the woman the upper hand in family court should she decide to end the relationship at some time in the future.

To achieve its objectives, the justice system applies the carrot and the stick approach. After you have been charged by the police their strategy is simple.....

Step one – they give you the big stick

Shortly after being charged, you will appear before a judge and a court date set. A restraining order is often placed against you where you are ordered to stay away from your home, wife and children. A court date will set that is often months ahead.

The court gives you the stick because they want to put you under a lot of pressure and inconvenience which will help make you more agreeable to their demands which will follow later. A court date a long way down the road will again add even more pressure as you think of not seeing your kids for weeks and having to live out of a suitcase until the court. They also know that if the man breaks the restraining order, even at the request of his spouse that there are grave consequences for the man.

Step Two – They offer you the carrot

At some point down the road, the authorities will come to you or your solicitor and ask if you would like to plead guilty to the charges. They will tell you that if you plead guilty that this will allow you to be able to go back home to your wife and kids and that you will get a simple conditional discharge with no criminal record. They will tell you that if you don't plead guilty that it will cost you lots of money in legal fees and that you may be barred from returning home until after the court. In fact, the authorities will talk to you like a friend saying they want to help you go home and that this is the best way to do it.

If you know that you are truly innocent, don't jeopardize the future of you and your children. When you are asked to plead guilty tell them clearly.....

NO WAY!

As a man, be prepared to fight for truth and justice. Show your kids and your family that you are not going to get shafted by the system and take it lying down. Show them you are going to stand up and FIGHT BACK!

Some of the consequences if you were to plead guilty:

- The next time that you and your spouse get into an argument and she calls the police you will get hauled away from your home, no questions asked. You may even be jailed for an extensive period of time.
- At any time in the future should your spouse decide to leave the relationship she will be able to claim that you are abusive. Your guilty plea will be all the evidence she needs to give to the court to have you kicked out, get custody of the kids and possession of the home. This will give her the upper hand in family court.
- You will literally live in fear of ever getting your spouse angry again as she will be able to use your guilty plea against you at any time in the future. It's like having a free ticket to kick you out of your home that she can redeem at any time.